“ Auntie Ine was my favorite because she would let me come over and spend the night. I shaved for the first time at her house. She had a new PINK Flicker disposable razor sitting on the edge of the bathtub and I asked what it was for. She told me she used it to shave the hair from her legs. Well, I had hairy arms so that razor seemed like a great idea. I had finished my right arm, and maybe I had been missing a little too long. Anyhow she found me in the bathroom and was NOT pleased. She told me my arm hair could grow back and be black instead of blonde. I watched it very closely over the course of the new growth but determine that it had to be like the watermelon story, because I never grew one of those in my belly either!

Auntie Ine was always game to take us places. She took my brother Mike, cousin Tim and myself on a quick shopping errand. It was either Mike or Tim, likely Mike who discovered the straight pins in the men's collared shirts as we followed Auntie down the aisle. I don't know if she knew we called her Auntie Fatty Butt, but probably. Anyhow, one of the boys poked her in the butt with the shirt pin. I think we covered for ourselves pretty well the first few times...but as with so many things, all good things must end. As luck would have it though there was a small carnival in the parking lot. Auntie Ine walked out the store and over to the guy running the little carousel and motioned that we could come over and ride. What she failed to mention was that she paid him to keep the three of us on the ride until she was done shopping! I was a little queasy when we were finally allowed to get off! She was such a sweet treasure and so was Uncle Kenny. They will be missed.

“ My Big sister, oh the stories we could share, she thought she was my mom always keeping track of me, right to the end. She was a great fun loving gal.
