“ I was sad to hear of the passing of Don Hoover. In the late 90's, I talked him into returning to trombone again as my Uncle John (his cousin) had done with me after I finished my engineering night classes. I was able to find a Conn 88H trombone (same model and vintage he used to play) for him on ebay and sent it to him after having it overhauled to get it in playing shape. It looks like he had fun playing it in various groups for many years.

Don was a part of my life as a child as he'd sometimes stop by to visit and of course there were the family gatherings at the 4th of July (his father loved fireworks) and other holidays.

The weird thing was that I played trombone as he did and my sister Liz played the flute as his sister did.

I enjoyed meeting with Don and Barb for dinner with my parents when I'd visit NW Indiana after Don started playing trombone again. It was good to talk trombones and catch-up.
