“ Just wow. I grew up on his street and he was Moose to us Archies. Playground games, Matchbox cars in the sand, deciding and deciphering girls (One of his cousins pursued me and we both dated the same girl one year) , Boy Scouts singing and campouts. His parents were both deaf but never were they dumb. Birthday parties in his basement, riding motorcycles in the woods from his house. Games of War (I still remember the one time I broke one of his tackles) Throwing balls of tinfoil so the bats could swoop on them. Bruising lineman at Wirt.

“ Ed was my brother's best friend. He was around for as long as I can remember. When I was pregnant with my oldest daughter he had seen me in the grocery store check out. He called out to me since he was a few ailes away. He seen in was pregnant and said very loudly: you can't be pregnant I just changed your diapers yesterday! I still blush and laugh at that. He will be truly missed. God bless his soul and blessings to the family.
