“ This memory is from all the indoor flyer guys, at the Jean Sheppard Community Center  Hammond Indiana Hammond IN: Each Tues, and some Thurs, we all flew small electric planes indoors .

Frank and I had purchased small drones that were controlled off a cell phone. (By kinesthetic motion of the cell phone)

In the process of learning how to set up & fly the drones, there is a control setting that's called “airplane mode”  which we didn't know what it was for, so we didn't toggle on.

During the flight, Frank got a call on his cell phone and this broke the controll connection to the drone.

The drone began to fly right into the wall of the building. (no damage to anything!)

 no one was hurt and everybody was laughing like crazy!!!

You bet from then on if anybody flew a drone, using the iPhone, we made sure they set it up in the “airplane mode”
