“ My name is Gayle, and I grew up next door to the Cunningham family. I moved to Texas when I was 19, so the close friendships I had established as a child, were left behind in Gary, Indiana. But thankfully, all my happy, cherished memories, continue to stay with me, and my longtime buddy, " Frankie ", as I always called him, was among my fondest. From sledding down Kentucky Street in the winters, to lobbing a few crab apples, across the street at the aluminum awning of the neighborhood's resident " Meanie", Frankie was always right there, by my side. Only through Facebook, and my computer, and after more than 40 years, was I able to reach out to some of my favorite friends from so many years ago. Frankie was on the top of that list. Two years ago, I was back home, visiting family and some close friends, and had the opportunity to get to see, and talk to, my ol' buddy, at a softball game in Hobart, which I was watching with my best friend Liz, who also knew Frankie when we were kids. He hadn't changed so much, that I didn't immediately recognize him when he came walking up. It was so good to see him, and hear about his family, and talking about some of the things we did " back in the day". We laughed , especially when he shared a memory that I actually had forgotten. He told me about the time when we had gone to the movies together, when he was about 10 and I was 13. He said, he thought that it was his first date, until I made him sit in the row behind me! Frankie was a huge part of my happy days on Kentucky street, as were his parents, Frank and Irma. I was so glad to see Irma at my father's funeral in 2004. Irma is the only person that knew me from my childhood, and I wish I could be there to give her a big hug. But to all of Frankie's family, who I wish I could have met, I send my deepest condolences, and all of you are in my thoughts and prayers.
