“ I remember Herbie as a brother Mom always admired---one who left big shoes to fill as they grew up. I remember him as a fun-loving best friend to my Uncle---always quick to make a joke and draw a smile. I remember him as an exceedingly caring and protective father to my Cousins, tackling countless big and small tasks should they ever need a thing and a patient teacher to his grandchildren and later their children that followed. I remember him as a thoughtful, protective, kind-souled husband to my Aunt who offered him the same incredible virtues in return. But most of all, I remember him as someone I want to be---a person who lived an exemplary life, full of family, friends, and character that made a difference.
