“ I recently found out that Jamie passed away from Phil Thompson. Jamie and I played football at TFN. Jamie was very athletic and fast. We also went to California in 1991 to represent Illinois in the Marine Corps Youth Physical Fitness Championships. He was a cool dude, and he will be missed.

“Jamie was my first crush. In our teens. He was hot, funny, charismatic, and bigger than life. We dated on and off, and at some point vowed to marry each other if we were still single at 25. Not surprisingly, we didn't settle for one another. Both of us recognizing that deep love of another person does not always equal the love warranted in marriage.

As I would expect nothing less, he waited to find the love of his life. Jamie was not capable of settling. While I wish he met Lynette earlier, many people can't say they found the love of their life after a lifetime. So while it was far too short a time, I'll rest secure in the knowledge that Jamie found the holy grail. The love that he was always dreaming of.

Strangers may have seen him as a bit of a loud arrogant guy. Anyone that had the privilege of really knowing him, knew he had a secret squishy heart of gold. And I suspect it's impossible for those of us, to come to grips with losing that heart.

I've been waking up each morning trying to reconcile a world that Jamie is not a part of. He was too big and bold and such a force to be reckoned with, to think he could be with us for less than approximately 150 years.

My heart goes out to Lynette and all of Jamie's family. He somehow seemed capable of being Superman in life. Indestructible. RIP Superman. You are missed, and will never be forgotten.
