“I remember golfing with Uncle Jace and my dad years ago. It was wonderful spending that quality time with Uncle Jace. Throughout the day he kept singing a line from a song - “How lucky can one man be? I kissed her and she kissed me.” Even though my golfing sucked that day, that song kept putting a smile on my face, and I find myself singing it every now and then.

Uncle Jace was a gift to all of us and I will miss him. I pray that he enjoys eternal bliss in Heaven with our great and merciful God, and that I might one day sing that song with him there with a huge smile on my face. I love you Uncle Jace!
