“ Judy was a real live Barbie to me - the most exotic creature a 5 year old little sister could follow... like a puppy. Sneaking into her room to look at the beautiful collars she wore over her sweaters, gazing at her pop-bead necklaces and her stuffed white cat Francine. We sang “Get Along Without You” in harmony. I was a complete pest. I would threaten to tell her boyfriends “stuff,” and she would bribe me with a ballet tutu - that I never got.

What a caring and loving person. She took care of my parents when they moved to Crown Point. She took care of her family and friends. She survived illness and tragedy. My life was better because she was in it. There is a hole in my heart, Judy K, and I miss you. Love, Judy A.

“ Whenever I think of Judy, I am touched by her deep love for her family, and I can feel how much they cherish her in return. She finds joy in gathering with friends and reaching out to neighbors, motivated by the hopeful promises she finds in the Bible. That hope anchors her belief in a future paradise on earth, where sickness and death are no more, and everyone has a place to call home. She was such a loving, gentle, and kind soul, perpetually wearing a lovely smile that reflected her warm spirit.
