“ Linda and Ellie: I never met Mitch in person since he was a few years behind me in high school, although I have had many conversations with him over the years through Facebook. I would have loved to meet him face to face to tell him how much a respect and was inspired by his brutally honest personal assessments and photographs of his terminal illness. We enter this world with the intent to model ourselves as respectable citizens with a responsibility to ultimately become a contributing steward of the planet in an honorable way. Mitch left us too soon, but during his final battle for life, he gave us a clear insight into what it means to cherish every breath we take, every minute we live, every hour, day, week, month, year because life is finite; and we all must come to the realization that the legacy we leave behind should include a sensitivity to the true human condition. I think Mitch lived and breathed a deep appreciation for human life and respect for the planet to which he was a significant resident and steward. I sense he epitomized these qualities and those of us who also witness a zest for life should continue on with that same appreciation Mitch demonstrated as among the finest example of the human spirit.
