“ I remember Uncle Ronnie as someone who was always kind and accepting of the downtrodden, and I don't mean merely tolerant, but literally accepting into his life, as it always seemed to me, from afar, that throughout his life he had plenty of society's "undesirables" within his orbit. Too many of us Christians often forget that characteristic, which Christ so abundantly modeled for us, but Uncle Ronnie didn't forget. So it doesn't come as any surprise, that a man who exhibited love to the "lowest" members of the kingdom would show generous love to his own family, which I saw him demonstrate to my mom and dad, especially throughout my dad's long health decline and then to my mom alone, after my dad's passing. I saw him lovingly accept my now wife, Lisa, into the extended family when she was a shy teenager just getting to know me, let alone my extended family, and I experienced his helping hand when he set me up with a fish tank cleaning business when I was a flat broke teenager and could use the help. These are just a few of my own personal anecdotes. There are others, and I wasn't even around Uncle Ronnie much during my life. So I'm comforted, as I'm sure those who were closer to him are comforted, in the assurance that Uncle has gone on to his home and reward in our Father's heavenly kingdom. -- Steve Rasmussen

GR

My memories of Ronald began when I started dating his brother. Gary, Ron and I would great one another in the halls of East High School in between classes. Ronald was a usher for wedding, Gary stood up in Ron and June's wedding, he and June were God parents for my son, Kevin, when hr was baptized, he played Santa for us one Christmas Eve when my boys were little. I always called him a "rambling rose" because of the all the moves he made not only to different cities but also states. We always teased each other about our age since we're a few months apart he always claimed to be so much younger than me. He and Bill were very faithful about coming to Madison to visit Gary in the nursing home, when he was there for four months, his many hospital stays and at Hospice at the end of Gary's life. It is a blessing to know that Ron is now home with our Father in heaven along with his Mom, Dad and four brothers, many other family members and friends. Praise be to God.
