“ I met her in the online world and in time that led to years of near daily phone calls. When my travels were taking me to Nebraska in 2013 I decided to fly into Chicago and meet her and then drive the rest of the way.

This led to a couple more visits over the years and a whole lot more phone calls. Although lately they had become less frequent we still kept very much in touch. She introduced me to Tiebel's lake perch and strongbow's turkey. She showed me how to play blackjack properly, explained to my that I had an accent by telling my that my "Boston was showing" and had me search high and low in my part of the world when her favorite fabric softener scent was discontinued. It was in this same conversation that I found out what a duvet was and why it needed a cover.

She hated spiders, loved the comedian Colin Mochrie but not nearly as much as she loved her nephews Carson and Reilly who she spoke about often. I really am going to miss her stories, sense of humor and her unique viewpoint of the world. Rest easy my friend.
