“ i think of you often, almost 2yrs later. your energy comes around at times, but girl i do not dream!! but thanks for visiting me in a dream, that’s why i’m here... lots has changed, i know. maybe in another lifetime things will be different. i still see you from my dream when i shut my eyes, i still hear what u said to me. it still hurts my heart to know the ending to your story, i wish this never happened to you. your heart was too good for this world, it got really ugly when you left. give the dogs some pets and love for me. i hope you’re having fun w your mom and bff, i’m sure there was lots of catching up to do. you’re so missed and loved lots here though.. i will love and miss you forever, you beautiful soul. 💜🌱

“ We definitely found our way thru co- parenting... like not many people have been able to succeed in doing. But i think when you have two hearts such as ours , and for the ultimate goal... which was a boy who either of us would have died for & gave the world to.... it wasn't that difficult. We did have our differences at times, but ultimately we found our way, & I want to thank u for allowing me into you & Ethan's lives, because you guys changed my life & allowed me to love & raise a child I never had. You left us too soon, you are with your mom now. Please know I'll always be here for Ethan if this fine young man needs the closest thing to a mom in his life. I love u Stef....I love you Ethan.... rest in peace you beautiful soul💕
